

Endings to Deportation at breakfast

1.

I am shock. Someone who is a criminal prepares breakfast for other People. The Boss is coming. He asks, what is going on. I tell him that one of his workers stepped into a police-van. Oh my goodness, he says, and tells me a story. The man "Javier" is from Mexico or another Latin-American country. Also, he had no residence-permit, he says. But I just ask for my breakfast.

2.

... They seemed not to have noticed Javier's exit.

The authorities argued about him and Javier sat in their car. But then Javier jumped out of the car and wanted to run away. The officer drew his weapon and shot. I looked at the scene and couldn't believe my eyes. What did Javier do? Why did they shoot him? And why did nobody care?

Suddenly Javier stand up and walked to the authorities. They laughed and hugged him. I didn't know what was happening here. Javier came into the restaurant and saw my shocked face. He laughed. And then he told me.

It was a scene for an action movie. And I had been in the restaurant by chance. I laughed, too. Then Javier made my breakfast and I was happy.

I thought that maybe another customer could tell me what happened. First, I asked the two women behind me, but they didn't know what I was talking about. After that I asked the men who were reading the newspaper. They had seen what had happened, but they had no idea why and they simply didn't care. Then I left the place and spent the rest of the day thinking about what happened.

The next day I read in the newspaper that a wanted criminal called Javier had been caught. I was shocked, but at the same time I was really relieved because I finally knew what happened.

After 20 minutes the people at the cafe looked for 'Javier', but they didn't find him. Then I told them that two police officers came and grabbed him away. They looked shocked and didn't understand the situation.

One week later I was at "Clara's" again and ordered my breakfast special. Javier was not there and we still didn't know what had happened. A new person worked for his position, a girl named Lisa. When she brought my breakfast I was reading the newspapers. On the third page I saw him, his face in the newspaper. They wrote that he had stolen money from a gas station and run away. He didn't know where he to go and came to his work. But the police man found him and grabbed him away. He didn't say anything because he knew that he had done something bad. The newspaper or the police officers didn't tell the reason why he did this. And now every person know that he did something bad and was sad about this, because they thought that he would never do this. But still they don't know why, because he was actually a good person.

I didn't know what to do. I ran to the window and looked what the authorities were doing. I saw that the authorities punched Javier. I asked the customers to help but nobody reacted. Every one ate their breakfast as if nothing had happened. I ran to Javier to help him. The authorities saw me and punched me in the face. I felt helpless.

6.

Javier goes with the police and he is really angry. The policeman blames Javier for something he has not done. Javier snaps and insults the policeman. The policeman doesn't like it and he handcuffs him. Javier defends himself and screams. Ultimately, before the policeman has put the handcuffs on him, he reaches for the pistol of the policeman. He tries to calm Javier, but Javier shoots the policeman and runs away with the pistol.

7.

The protagonist doesn't get breakfast and goes home. After a few days, the protagonist goes to work and sees Javier in the restaurant. He goes to him and asks what happened. Javier tells him that the police thought he was a different person. A person who had hurt an old woman and had stolen her money. He looks like Javier but the police found the right person and Javier and the protagonist are friends now and everything is fine.

8.

The protagonist looks out of the window and sees a lot of police cars. Javier is in one of them.

In Clara's it smells like a pyrotechnics, so everybody runs out. The protagonist remembers his eggs on the grill and runs to the kitchen. He tries to stop the fire. In the back door is Javier who extinguishes the fire. Javier tells the protagonist that the police made a mistake and that they confused him. They talk about a few things and eat a cheese omelette together.

After all the man goes behind the counter and turns the eggs and cooks his omelette. As he wants to eat, guests enter the restaurant. He gives them what they want. Then he has his breakfast and goes home.
